

Faculty of Humanities & Social Sciences
School of Applied language and Intercultural Studies (SALIS)

Lecturer in Chinese Language & Culture (3 Year full-time contract)

As an integral part of its continuing development of Chinese Studies, the School of Applied Language and Intercultural Studies (SALIS) seeks to appoint a suitably qualified person to undertake lecturing, research and a leadership role in Chinese language and culture within the School.

The School particularly welcomes applications from candidates who combine expertise in Chinese Studies with one of the other research specialisms offered in the School – Intercultural Studies, Translation Studies, Language Studies, Comparative Literature Studies - and /or Ethnographic Research Methodology.

Applicants for this post are expected to have a relevant doctoral degree (or near completion), appropriate teaching experience and a good record of post-doctoral activities in related research and publication. Candidates should have native-speaker-like proficiency in Mandarin Chinese and demonstrable experience of teaching and research in Chinese Studies at university level. The successful candidate will be expected to provide leadership in developing the teaching and research agenda for Chinese Studies within the School.

Chinese Studies is a relatively new discipline within the School, having been introduced at undergraduate level in September 2008. The first cohort of undergraduate students taking Chinese will travel to China in September 2010 to spend Year 3 of their degree programme studying at a Chinese University. The successful candidate will be expected to coordinate and monitor the students' Year Abroad experience, and to actively develop further exchange links within China.

The successful candidate will be expected to make an important contribution to the research and teaching profile of the School, as well as to undertake significant administrative responsibilities. In accordance with the multilingual nature of the School and its interdisciplinary ethos, the successful candidate will also be expected to collaborate with colleagues in other areas on interdisciplinary projects of mutual interest.
