Dublin City University
Faculty of Humanities & Social Sciences
School of Education Studies
Lecturer in Educational Psychology
(Fixed Term Contract of 3 Years)

The School of Education Studies in Dublin City University is seeking to appoint a Lecturer in Educational Psychology from 1 September 2012.

The School of Education Studies is a national centre of excellence in the fields of Special Educational Needs, Positive Behavioural Support and the integration of pupils with Emotional and Behavioural Difficulties into mainstream education. The successful applicant will be expected to play a role in the development of this profile through successfully bidding for external funding as well as publishing in a range of high impact international publications. The successful applicant will also have the opportunity to contribute to the emerging University specialism in the general field of Psychology. The individual appointed to the post must hold a PhD in the field, to have a strong research background at national and international level, to have a wide range of experience of lecturing and supervising research work up to and including Doctoral level and to be thoroughly familiar with the Irish Education setting.

The School of Education Studies offers degrees in initial teacher education at both BSc and Professional Diploma level, a BSc in Education and Training, Masters Degrees in Education and Training Management and in Guidance Counselling and a significant Doctorate in Education programme. The successful candidates will be expected to play a role in the development and delivery of the School's taught programmes and in the identification and delivery of new programmes in their specialist area. The school offers excellent opportunities for candidates to teach within their own area of research specialisation and to supervise PhD candidates.

The school is committed to high quality research and supports its staff in such work. The school has led research programmes funded by the Irish Research Council for Humanities and Social Sciences, the EU and other national and international donors. The successful candidate will be expected to be committed to publication in well-regarded, international academic peer-reviewed journals and they will also be expected to contribute to the ongoing development of the research programmes in the school.
